JONATHAN ALEXANDER | ANIMALL 4.0 FINAL PITCH PRESENTATION

SURFS UP DUDE!

INTRODUCTION

My name is Jonathan Alexander, and I am a designer on the oBx Creative Team 2026. This is my pitch for Slow Tide Surf Shop, a sea turtle inspired surf lifestyle shop where guests can step out of the mall and into a relaxed coastal escape inside AniMall in Orlando, Florida.

OBJECTIVE

The animal themed entertainment giant AniMall Theme Mall, Inc. aims to transform the typical mall experience into an interactive, enjoyable, and unforgettable adventure where visitors can literally immerse themselves in an animal inspired world and escape the mundane brick-and-mortar mall.

AniMall is creating a one-of-a-kind, animal-inspired experience that feels more like an adventure than a regular mall. Every store, attraction, and environment should help bring that world to life, using playful design, immersive details, and technology to make guests feel like they stepped into something memorable, exciting, and completely different from the usual shopping experience.

AniMall is built around an animal theme, but the experience is really made for people, especially the tourists and families visiting Orlando. Since nearly 70% of visitors are expected to be tourists, the goal is to create something more exciting than a zoo or museum, where parents, kids, couples, and visitors of all ages can play, explore, take photos, and make memories together.

AniMall's goal is to become one of those places people feel like they have to visit when they come to Orlando, right alongside the bigger theme park attractions. The experience needs to be fun, creative, and memorable enough that visitors want to talk about it, take pictures, and recommend it as a can't-miss stop during their trip.

CHARACTERISTICS

AniMall anticipates most of their visitors will be tourists visiting Orlando. Visitors will range from people who live in other states or even countries. A lot of these visitors will only be there one time. For this reason, AniMall wants you to feel like you are in a place that you will remember, take photos at, and brag about.

Much of AniMall's audience will be families with children. However, couples, teens, young adults and general casual shoppers will visit too and should feel just as catered to. Parents will want fun and safe things for their children. Older guests will want access to stores, food, attractions, and experiences that don't feel childish to them.

The primary target audience for AniMall are consumers seeking an experience beyond your typical shopping excursion. Those that desire entertainment, discovery, and something outside of the traditional mall or themed entertainment experience. Concepts that are playful, immersive, easy to consume, and large scale will resonate best with this audience.

TARGET AUDIENCE

For the individuals who appreciate island vibes, and shopping with intention. They like to feel their purchases are useful, helpful, and derived from the beach lifestyle. They also want to make sure everything they own has a purpose. Whether it's made from upcycled beach garbage or sustainable materials, Slow Tide offers beautifully designed items that feel good AND do good.

CONCEPT REVEAL

What if...? What if AniMall had a surf lifestyle shop designed by sea turtles?

Slow Tide is a surf-inspired lifestyle shop built around the idea of sea turtles creating a calm, beachy experience for people visiting AniMall. For this concept, I'm acting as the sea turtle's design partner, helping bring their world to life in a way people can step into and enjoy. Instead of feeling like a typical surf shop, Slow Tide is meant to reflect the smooth, relaxed energy of the ocean through the perspective of one of its most graceful travelers.

The shop would sell surf-style clothing, beach accessories, hats, sandals, towels, bags, water bottles, souvenirs, and other lifestyle items. The space would feel immersive, using shell shapes, wave forms, driftwood textures, and soft ocean toned lighting. I want it to feel like more than just a store. It should feel like a mini tropical escape inside AniMall.

This concept works because it combines a strong story with real retail potential. Sea turtles represent travel, flow, patience, and a connection to the ocean, which gives the brand meaning beyond just the visual theme. Slow Tide could bring in sales through apparel, accessories, souvenirs, collectibles, and seasonal items, while also giving AniMall a memorable and photogenic destination.

Proposed Names: "ShellHouse Break", "Slow Tide", and "The Turtle Break"

PROMISE STATEMENT

At Slow Tide, we promise to give customers a relaxed, sea turtle-inspired surf experience with helpful staff, sustainable surfboards and apparel, and local events that connect people to the ocean, the island lifestyle, and the community around it.

FINAL NAME

Slow Tide was selected because it relates back to both sea turtles and surf culture. Slow embodies the peacefulness and stability of a sea turtle as well as the carefree island vibe we want our customers to experience when walking into our shop. Tide symbolizes how everything relates back to the ocean; the waves, surfing, and overall lifestyle pace of living near the water. As a whole, Slow Tide allows our audience to understand, remember, and say a relaxed name that directly attributes to our sea turtle inspired surf shop.

FINAL LOGO

The logo for Slow Tide Surf Shop is designed to reflect a calm, beachy, island lifestyle while still feeling bold and playful and memorable. The icon combines a turtle, a wave, and a surfboard, which helps communicate the heart of the brand in one simple mark. The turtle represents the identity of the shop and the slow, steady, relaxed energy behind it. The wave connects the logo to the ocean, surf culture, and movement. The bold, chunky wordmark was chosen because it feels playful, retro, and surfer like, which fits the laid back personality of the brand. The blue and sandy beige color palette was selected to reflect the ocean, shore, and the relaxed feeling of island life.

LOGO AND BRANDING

STOREFRONT

The moment you see Slow Tide, it's supposed to feel like a warm welcome to the beach. Palm trees, surfboards, and some simple tropical greenery frame the front of the shop, giving off that tropical vibe. I wanted the entrance to feel fun, easygoing, like a little slice of island life right in the middle of AniMall. So, before customers even step inside, they should already get that calm, sunny feeling that Slow Tide is all about. Honestly, it's about creating a sense of escape, a feeling that this isn't just a store, it's an experience.

INTERIOR

The interior of Slow Tide is meant to feel simple, open, and relaxed, almost like stepping into a little piece of island life inside the mall. I wanted the space to use a few strong surf inspired elements, like the surfboards, wave like display shapes, and the front counter, to make the theme clear without overcomplicating it. The layout feels clean and easy to move through, which matches the calm and laid back personality of the brand. Even with the simple sketch style, the goal is for customers to feel like they're in a casual surf shop that is friendly, beachy, and easy to enjoy.

INTERIOR ATMOSPHERE

The interior atmosphere of Slow Tide is meant to feel calm, open, and easygoing, like a little break from the rest of the mall. I wanted it to give off that relaxed island and surf vibe without feeling too busy or overdesigned. The surfboards, simple display counter, and beach-inspired shapes help create a space that feels casual and welcoming, while the open layout keeps it feeling light and easy to move through. Overall, the goal is for people to walk in and instantly feel more relaxed, like they stepped into a small surf shop where the mood is peaceful, friendly, and connected to ocean life.

SLOW TIDE TOUCHPOINT

The staff uniforms at Slow Tide are designed to feel casual, comfortable, and on-brand, almost like something the employees would genuinely want to wear even outside of work. I wanted the look to match the relaxed island and surf vibe of the store, so the uniform feels more like beach apparel than a strict employee outfit. Since Slow Tide also connects to the ocean in a deeper way, the shirts sold in the store and worn by staff would be made from recycled beach litter, plastic, and other ocean waste materials. That adds more meaning to the brand because it shows that the shop is not just inspired by sea life, but also respects and protects it. Overall, the uniforms help create a friendly, laid-back look while also supporting the brand's message of ocean connection, sustainability, and island lifestyle.

SLOW TIDE TOUCHPOINT

The surfboards at Slow Tide are not just part of the store's look, they are actual surfboards made to be used and enjoyed. I wanted them to reflect the brand's connection to both surf culture and sustainability, so the boards would be made from recycled beach wood that has been specially processed to be lightweight and durable. That makes them feel true to the island lifestyle side of the brand while also giving them real purpose beyond decoration. The clean shape and turtle logo help tie them into the overall identity of the shop, but they are still meant to be real boards that customers can buy and take out into the water.

SLOW TIDE TOUCHPOINT

The flip flops at Slow Tide connect back to the shop's message, they would be made from recycled beach waste, litter, and recovered plastic materials that have been processed into a durable and comfortable product. That gives them a purpose beyond just style and helps show that Slow Tide cares about the ocean that inspires the brand. The turtle logo adds a clear branded touch, while the overall design keeps them easygoing, beachy, and practical for everyday wear.

BRAND IDENTITY PACKAGE

The Slow Tide brand identity package was designed to keep the brand consistent across every touchpoint. Using the logo, ocean blue, sandy neutrals, and wave inspired details, each piece helps carry the same relaxed surf and island lifestyle feel. Even in standard materials like the business card, letterhead, and envelope, the brand still feels clean, recognizable, and on theme.

BRAND POSTER

The Slow Tide poster was designed to grab attention right away and quickly communicate the brand's fun and island inspired personality. The bold type, bright coastal colors, and large turtle surfer graphic make it feel playful, energetic, and easy to remember, while the wave, sun, and ocean imagery help reinforce the surf and beach lifestyle behind the brand. Overall, the poster works as both an advert and a visual introduction to Slow Tide, giving people a clear sense of the shop's vibe.

WRAPPING UP

Slow Tide Surf Shop brings a breezy beach getaway to AniMall that is unique from the loud and hectic attractions found around Orlando. It's a place to unwind, shop surf-inspired wares and experience a brand that not only loves the beach lifestyle, but cares about protecting our oceans too. Sustainable clothing, beach-waste recycled goods, functional surfboards and turtle-inspired tranquility give Slow Tide more to offer than just another retail store. They offer visitors a memorable getaway that tourists, families and beach enthusiasts will remember long after their visit.
